Scams/Other

Computer Virus Scam

On Friday, 05-01-20, Officer Haas investigated a report that was sent to us from the Adult Protective Services naming a 76-year old Daly City resident as a possible victim of elder abuse via internet fraud. An un-named Wells Fargo Bank associate saw that the victim completed a $14,600 wire transfer to a bank in China in March and flagged the transaction as suspicious. Officer Haas went to the victim's home to investigate. The victim told the officer that her computer got a virus and a message popped up on the screen with instructions to call the phone number on the screen to have it fixed. The victim said she called the number and was routed through an automated phone tree to a person claiming to be able to repair the computer if she could provide her bank account and routing number. The victim said she gave the information, but her computer was not fixed. The victim told the officer in the following days, she received a call from a blocked number from a person claiming to work for Microsoft. The person told the victim their company accidentally deposited $14,000 into her checking account and that she needed to wire it back to them. The victim said she followed the instructions and wired the funds to "CMB Wing Lung Bank". Within a couple of days, the initial deposit from the company disappeared, and the wire transfer she initiated had cleared, deducting $14,600 from her account. The victim said she was notified by Wells Fargo Bank that there was suspicious activity on her account and saw she was scammed.

These scammers are so convincing. Please be careful.
