Scams/Other

“iCloud” Scam

On Monday, 06-01-20 at 4:00 p.m., a 66-year old Daly City resident received a call on her cellphone from a man who said he worked as a Tech employee for Apple Corporation and was calling to inform her that there was a breach to her iCloud account by hackers. The caller told the victim that the hackers gained access to her financial information, and he needed to install a security suite on her computer to remove the hackers. The caller quoted the victim a fee for $2,500 and told her the fee could be paid in $500 denomination Target and Best Buy cards. The caller told the victim that the $2,500 service fee would be refunded with the security suite was installed and her iCloud account had been cleaned of hackers and viruses. The victim said about an hour later, she purchased the cards and, as instructed, provided the numbers on the card to the caller. The victim said the caller provided her with an internet domain to search and instructed her to go to the website and type in a security key he had provided so he could remotely access her computer. The victim said she got on her computer and followed the caller’s instructions. The victim said she began to receive emails from a sender called “Apple Support” who provided her a receipt for payments and told her she would be refunded her money two to three minutes after the security suite was installed. The victim said she did not receive her refund but continued to receive emails from “Apple Support”, showing the progress of the virus clean-up and requesting further payment. The victim said the caller contacted her by text who said she would need to keep submitting payments using the Target and Best Buy cards. The victim said between 06-01-20 and 06-06-20, she kept sending payments—totaling $27,500. The victim finally realized she was the victim of a scam and called us.

As with any of these scammers, the callers are so CONVINCING. Please pass the word along to anyone you know about callers claiming to be from companies such as Apple, PG&E, Social Security, Microsoft and the Internal Revenue Service. None of these companies would ask you for gift cards for payment. I know they are convincing, but it is NOT true!!
